PC In the interview, Moody was discussed, particularly Figure 7 and the supporting portions of the publication. The Examiner suggested that the claim in the proposed amendment does not distinguish between a chart where the node represents a single person and one where the node represents a plurality of persons. It was agreed that if the applicants would (1) amend their claims to include this limitation "single person" and (2) argue this point with respect to Moody, whose nodes shown in Figure 7 represent documents involving multiple people, then the claims would be in condition for allowance assuming no new art was discovered in a subsequent search.
